A message from the editor

Dear Reader,

I am absolutely delighted to bring you my maiden issue (excluding reunions) as the Editor-in-Chief of the Princeton Tiger. For the exact reason that this is my first issue in charge, I will be absolutely wrecked if you hate it. I have put my email throughout this issue, so I guess if you hate it you can let me know. However, I am incredibly happy with the work that has been put into what you are about to read.

This year, I was able to trick three frosh into hanging out with the sophomores I tricked into joining TigerMag last year. Essentially, I am forcing people into committing their time, effort, and humor to the magazine. These three frosh have brought a new (ish) life to The Princeton Tiger. Here is what they add:

1. They always try to make it to meetings
2. They are actually pretty funny (honestly I was worried for a really long time)
3. They all became best friends
4. When they can't make a meeting, they address me as "Ms. Martin," and that is actually the appropriate thing to do in this situation, so I'm glad I didn't have to teach them.

See! All great things.

Anyways, as always, this first issue of the year (February is the beginning of the year trust) is our Frosh Issue! You may be a bit confused. "Georgia if this is the 'Frosh Issue' why is it not called the 'Frosh Issue' like it always is?" And first, thank you so much for that great question Loyal Reader of TigerMag who remembers the issue title from previous years' issues. I have an answer for you, surely I do.

Our frosh this year are named Luke, Elena, and Gavin (last year our frosh were named Georgia). Here at the Princeton Tiger, we want to show great appreciation and dedication to our hilarious, present, showing up at the meetings, cool frosh.

No better way to pay homage to cool people than to title an issue after them. Initially, some people weren't always at meetings, so as punishment this was going to be the Gavin Issue. But then we were wowed by Luke's persistence and how perfect Elena is, so we decided to include them. Acronym time it is (go read Princeton Acronym Guide if this confuses you). We ended up choosing to make this the LEG issue for L.uke, E.lena, G.avin, but alternately Let Eisgruber Game, a really important movement happening right now in the Princeton E-Sports community.

To be clear this is not ordered by how much I (or any other chairpeople) like our frosh, since we almost always support women first. But acronyms are hard because not everything is as sexy as a LEG lamp (RIP to the GEL issue cover; that would've been too much for y'all).

Shoutout to the Frosh for sticking with me as we transition to new leadership (I rule with an iron fist, it's a big shift from last year). Enjoy the issue! FORCE your friends to enjoy it too!

Irrevokably,

Georgia Martin

Sonnet for the Student Publications Building 4th Floor Bathroom

I fear the world will never know your name
Nor know your vast and gaping bathroom space,
A room that could fit two stalls just the same,
But only sink and toilet in this place.

A mere five-second walk from Tiger Mag,
So few will see your sage-green tiled floor.
No elevator, must take stairs that sag
To reach your special, hidden, secret door.

I wonder 'bout that toilet seat that's up
Whene'er it is I need to take a piss.
Who raises it? I'd like to ask him "'Sup?
You know these walls? Your prox is on the list?"

I fear he's with the Tory, 'cross the hall;
Could evil lurk in that one room-sized stall?

How to Stand Out at Princeton

Some quick steps to standing out from the crowd at Princeton (for frosh):

1. Major in undecided (mysterious)
2. Whenever the name of any eating club is mentioned, be sure to disclaim that eating club culture "doesn't really speak" to you. (shows you don't need anyone's validation)
3. Ensure that your shoes are never in good condition (demonstrates how down to earth you are)
4. Complain constantly about being "broke" (factuality irrelevant, shows humility)
5. "I actually thrifted it." (you thrifted it, and you're the only one who does that here)
6. "I actually have it on vinyl." (you have it on vinyl, and you paid way too much for it)
7. Complain about how busy you are, but never elaborate (mysterious and in-demand)
8. Complain about your "insane weekend," but (you guessed it! You're getting good!) never elaborate

Math Placement Test

Tiger Mag has become aware that the Math department, tired of shepherding stupid children through very easy math courses, is implementing a Placement Test for next year's frosh. The leaked email detailing this development reads:

"The amount of imbeciles thinking they can take MAT 102 is ridiculous. The amount of losers taking MAT 175 is absurd. How on Earth do we have more students sign up for 215 year after year? Every year we make the classes harder and harder to weed out the dummies, but they become larger in number. We need to prevent large swaths of students whose capacities are beneath this department from wasting our professor's time. I propose a math placement test, enforceable by the registrar. Some sample questions:

1. Do you like Math?

- a) Yes (Go to question 2)
- b) No (Go to question 3)

2. Do you love Math?

- a) Yes (Go to question 4)
- b) No (Go to question 3)
- c) Love isn't real (Go to question 5)
- d) What is love? (Baby don't hurt me)

3. Are you good at Math?

- a) I was good at it in High School (Go to question 6)
- b) I was good at it in Middle School (Go to question 7)
- c) I was good at it in Elementary School (Go to question 8)
- d) Admissions confused me with someone else (Go. Leave and don't come back)

4. Do you like the idea of loving something that doesn't love you back?

- a) Yes (Go take MAT 215)
- b) Definitely (Go take MAT 216)
- c) What are you talking about? (Go to question 9)

5. You're planning to be a philosophy major aren't you?

- a) Yes (Go to question 8)
- b) No (Go straight to Jail. Do not pass Go, do not collect $200)

6. Are you a BSE student?

- a) Yes (Go take an EGR class. $\pi = 3$ and all that.)
- b) No (Go to question 10)

7. Are you going to major in the life or social sciences?

- a) Yes (Go to question 9)
- b) No (Go rethink all of your life choices before you get a useless degree)

8. Is the only reason you are considering taking a math class to fill the QCR requirement?
- Yes (Go take Emails for Females (COS 109). We don't want you here.)
 - No (Go to Question 9)
9. Do you like Lagrange or Leibniz Notation Better?
- Either answer (Good job finishing Calculus. Much like your parents, we are not proud of you.
Go take MAT 175)
 - What? (Go take MAT 101)
10. THINK VERY CAREFULLY ABOUT THIS ONE. What's the derivative of the line tangent to the curve $f(x) = \sin(x) + \cot((e^x)/(x-3)) + \ln(\text{floor}(x) - |x|)$ when $x = 1$?
- Undefined (You probably guessed. In case you didn't, take MAT 201 or 202)
 - Uhhh... no clue (Go take MAT 101)
 - All I know is that I want to be tangent to your curves (Drop Out)

This concludes the test. Hopefully this will dissuade the feeble-minded from stumbling into our lecture halls.

PLEASE STOP GIVING ME DUMB STUDENTS PLEASE

Dear All Affected (effected?) ,

I swear to GOD if this University keeps allowing IDIOTS to take math classes I WILL LOOSE MY MIND. I know you all feel the same (MAT202 Professor's I know you feel it even moor). WE DESERVE MORE THEN THIS. WE ARE GRATE PROFESSORS, THEY ARE USELESS STUDENTS. IF YOU CANNOT UNDERSTAND MATH DON'T TAKE METH THEIR ARE SO MANY CLASSES FOUR THE QCR PLEASE.

I suggest we impelmint a placement test. I have added a draft to this email. I think that this makes cents since the idiots are gonna get us fired if we aren't careful.

Your Friend,

We Might Be in Hoboken Next Year

President Eisgruber has been in the news a lot this past year, with the hideous art museum, the pressure to move to Hoboken, the Supreme Court overturning affirmative action, and so on. Now, everyone knows that the museum will never be finished and that Princeton has already handled the SCOTUS decision better than other schools (Harvard). The main issue currently facing Princeton, and frankly, the United States of America, is whether or not the campus should be moved to the amazing town of Hoboken, New Jersey.

According to official sources, Princeton students gripe about everything from midterms, to food quality, to the hole in their backpack through which I keep losing my Hoboken stickers, to grades. Yet, Princeton students complain by far the most about the campus not being in Hoboken, NJ. Hoboken is similar to Princeton, in that it is a town in the great state of New Jersey. However, Hoboken has various qualities that make many students question why Princeton University would ever be in Princeton.

Hoboken, the birthplace of Frank Sinatra, is also where the first Oreo was sold, where the first brewery in America was created, where baseball began, where the zipper was invented, where the first Blimpie Sandwich Shop was opened, where the person who created the waffle cone was from, and so much more. The crime rate is reported to be 0%, the homeless population is 0, and the diversity is 100%. In the Daily Princetonian's Frosh Survey, the most popular response to "Where is your dream place to live?" was "Hoboken," followed by "Paris," then "HBKN" (the most common abbreviation for Hoboken).

Not only students have suggested moving to Hoboken. Faculty, alumni, and other humans have also taken notice. When asked about the consequences of a hyperpolarized America, Democratic House leader Hakeem Jeffries said, "The only thing counterbalancing a polarizing U.S.A. right now is the shared love for Hoboken, New Jersey. Republicans and I disagree on many subjects, but Hoboken is not and will never be one of them. It is perhaps the sole unifying force of this country. It is truly shocking that Princeton University has yet to move their campus to Hoboken."

President Eisgruber, under pressure from the board, is expected to move Princeton University's main campus to Hoboken some time in the coming year. The primary question is now when, and will we become "Hoboken University?" I certainly hope so.

25 Roommate Red Flags

Since the fall semester has started, we at Tiger Mag have been hard at work interviewing every freshman student who will speak to us about their roommate red flags, horror stories, and pet peeves. See yourself in their testimonies? Maybe you and your roommate should talk...

1. "He eats in the room and leaves his dirty dhal dishes stacked on his desk. Our common room smells like roast beef..."
2. "Why is she holding pre-games on Wednesday nights? Like, where are you even going? And are they still pre-games if they last until 1 am? Pre-what?"
3. "Still has Star Wars bed sheets."
4. "I caught her using my hairbrush."
5. "When I showed up to move-in and he already had the Male Manipulator music posters up on his wall, I knew I was cooked."
6. "He's eighteen years old and he can't do his own laundry?"
7. "I was so glad to have our own bathroom, but when my class is starting in five minutes and my roommate's been in there for the past hour I feel less glad."
8. "And then when I asked her why she had my brush she said it was 'for the greater good?' Like what am I supposed to do with that?"
9. "She is never not in the room with her friends and they are never not talking."
10. "We've only ever communicated through passive-aggressive sticky notes."
11. "He told me my side of the room looked clean."
12. "After the hairbrush thing, I remembered she said she wants to major in Mol Bio and I put two and two together and asked her if she was trying to clone me. She stared at me and said 'I'm gonna be so for real, what would you say if I was...?'"
13. "He moved out after a few days to somewhere in town because he didn't want to be 'slumming it with the poors.'"
14. "Went away for a weekend and when I got back learned she had a friend sleeping over in my bed the whole time."
15. "Their alarm goes off every morning at 7. They don't wake up, but I do..."
16. "Found out there's like a whole laboratory in her closet??? She has all these samples of MY HAIR on microscope slides and test tubes and shit and it's freaking me out."
17. "Had to call CPS on him because he hadn't left the room in a week."
18. "He's always watching Instagram reels at full volume in the common room."
19. "Literally haven't seen her since orientation. Her stuff's still here. Where did she go?"
20. "Not just hair—caught her taking my clothes out of my drawers because she 'needed them for a friend' since she 'knew they would fit??'"
21. "Nude Yoga."
22. "I have woken up at least a dozen times to a different girl asleep in his bed after he's run to his Friday 9am."
23. "Yeah, yesterday I woke up to someone who wasn't my roommate in her bed, but it wasn't a guy or anything, just somebody who shared every single one of my features. I think it sensed my presence because it suddenly rose up to look at me with my same face and released this deep, guttural whine that echoed in the confines of our dorm. It shifted enough for me to make out a massive rust-colored stain beneath the bed sheets and the shredded remains of my roommate's quarter zip. I think it ate her."
24. "[Grrrrrooooowwwl...]"
25. "Clone Me eats in the room and leaves its dirty dishes on its desk and I think that's gross."

Meet the Zees

Semester one is over! You've had ample time to meet new people, but what's really important (according to your RCA) is that you know the closest community you'll ever have: your zee group! Every year people forge short lasting friendships and really weird relationships within their dimly lit, horribly carpeted hall in Forbes (or wherever you freaks live IDK this is personal experience based, sue me). So let's check in...

HOW WELL DO YOU KNOW YOUR ZEE GROUP?

I don't care what you said, the answer is "not well enough" luckily I did the super real research into every single zee group on campus and it can be boiled down to the following 8 types of people.

1. The Athlete
2. The No Name
3. The Future RCA
4. The Homophobe/The Gay
5. The Zee-cest Couple
6. The Hot Mess
7. Your Nemesis
8. You

1. The Athlete

You probably have a few athletes in your zee group. Maybe you've spoken to them. They know nothing about you and don't care to. They are probably mediocre at their sport because if they were good, you'd know. Maybe they play squash? They wrestle? Golf? Are they one of the 800 kickers on the football team? It doesn't matter. This isn't the SEC, this is an Ivy League school that's not good at sports.

2. The No Name

You've met them once. You've never seen them since. Maybe they moved out? Is their roommate okay? I couldn't find anything out about them either, and I'm apparently "a professional stalker" so it's a lost cause. Maybe you'll see them at move out?

3. The Future RCA

Who has their shit this together freshman year of college? How can someone with straight 9 am classes be so joyous? It's almost unreal how they hunt you down in any shared space to check in on you. Not even your actual RCA cares that much.

4. The Homophobe/The Gay

There's an undeniable tension in the hall. You or a very close loved one (neighbor) has been affected. Someone out there is trying to pray the gay away from the zee group. It's not gonna work. The gays of the zee group will win the war, but the homophone won't go down without a fight (that's homoerotic, I think they might be gay too).

5. The Zee-cest Couple

Somehow there's something more sinister than a homophobe in your midst. There's a freaky couple in the hall. How does your RCA feel about the fact that two of their children are.....together?? I don't know, it's hard to tell if they are actually together, because I heard he had a girlfriend, but he was definitely making out with your roommate at Terrace last Thursday. Sooooo, jury's out. How do you feel about all of this? I feel gross.

6. The Hot Mess

They are failing MAT201, they've just gotten dumped, their laundry burnt up in the dryer that doesn't spin. Somehow everything that can go wrong, has gone wrong for them. You saw them get PMC'd last Wednesday. WEDNESDAY. Not at a party, just in your hall absolutely plastered. Maybe spring semester will be better? Maybe it'll be worse (it will be worse).

7. Your Nemesis

You know you have one. It's the perfect girl that's in all of your classes. It's your next door neighbor who has really loud sex ALL THE TIME. It's the kid down the hall who seems to still have joy in their life. It's your direct roommate that raised their bed higher than yours. It's some motherfucker that just irks you deeply to your very soul. There's nothing you can do about it, they're just there (you should kill them, listen to the voices, do it, do it).

8. You

You're in your zee group too! You're the only person your RCA cares about (they told me) so make sure you go to all the events or they'll get super depressed. Maybe you see yourself in one of the previously mentioned archetypes (if you're the Homophobe please email me at eic@tigermag.com so that we can fight), hopefully it's not too freaky.

My zee group was, of course, perfect and amazing. I don't know what's happening this year. Must be something in the water, or the air, or the food. It's probably going to kill you, but you'll survive.

Princeton Acronym Guide

One semester into Princeton and still confused by all of this school's wacky acronyms? Tiger Mag is here to help!

SPIA = School of Puppetry for Invertebrate Audiences

Students majoring in SPIA are really doing innovative things and widening our motto "in the service of humanity" going past humanity to serve the world's crustaceans, starfish, insects, and worms. SPIA courses include such bangers as "Marionettes for Mollusks (SPI 200)," "Ventriloquism for Vampire Squid (SPI 319)," and "Shadow Puppets for Shrimp (SPI 370)."

ORFE = Open-minded Radicals for Financial Equality

ORFE is the longest-running activist group on campus dedicated to advocating for socialist economic policies and workers' rights. The group's current projects involve raising the minimum wage for student workers on campus and converting all eating clubs into co-ops. Next time someone shares that they're involved with ORFE, make sure to tell them "Thank you for all you're doing for the working class."

PUID = Prioritizing Underage Intoxication Downstairs

When an eating club bouncer asks for your PUID, they're really ensuring that you as a person under the age of 21 have prime access to the basement taproom. In fact, as a freshman, you can get into any list-only event on the Street because of Princeton's commitment to PUID (especially if you're still 17!) If a bouncer says you're not on the list, insist that they need to let you in because it's your right as a teen to get wasted.

PAA = Passive Aggressive Advisor

"Oh, you could totally do Physics 105 as your fifth class, it'll be sooo easy for a genius like you. Most students don't get 100s on all of their midterms, but you're not like other students, so maybe you'll prove me wrong if you just pull an all-nighter every day until your exams."

NCW = Norah Catherine Whitman

Contrary to popular belief, NCW actually is named for a donor, Norah Catherine Whitman, who is Meg Whitman's slightly-less wealthy younger cousin. Unfortunately for NCW, her cousin leveraged her own questionably-sourced wealth just a few weeks earlier, beating her out for the residential college title and cooler building design because there can't be two Whitman Colleges.

CPS = Child Protective Services

Child Protective Services is a state government agency established in response to the 1974 passage of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) meant to prevent, investigate, and intervene in cases of child abuse and neglect.

TI = Tower Institution

If someone tells you about a wild rager happening at TI this weekend, they're talking about the Tower eating club! Make sure to meet them at 13 Prospect Ave, and try to get there early, like at 8pm! That will go really well for you and meet all of your expectations.

BSE = Brontë, Shelley, Eliot

BSE refers to the study of the acclaimed female authors of the 19th century, especially Charlotte Brontë, Mary Shelley, and George Eliot. A BSE student is committed to studying literature and feminist literary theory from day one of their time at Princeton.

FORBES = Freshman Occult Ritual Bloodletting & Esotericism Society

One of Princeton's premier secret societies exclusive to freshmen. Maybe you missed the email? FORBES convenes in a hundred-year old building that used to be a hotel on the very edge of campus every fortnight to practice their occult rituals worshipping the photogenic grad tower rising in the distance. Said rituals often involve fire, which historically hasn't gone well for the Society. Decent dining hall, though.

P/D/F = Portable Document Format

Everyone knows what a PDF is.

A Short Review of the Princeton Pre-Read from Someone Who Absolutely Read It

The Princeton Pre-Read has been among the University's most cherished and historic campus traditions since its inception in 2013. The selected books introduce Princeton students to the rigorous intellectual environment on campus through the vaguely critical recitation of a maximum of three salient talking points from a 300+ page book, also conveniently located in the summary section of the Wikipedia page.

In the Pre-Read, the author deftly expands on the nuances of the specific and complex issues explored in the book. We as readers come gradually to understand the interactions between the many factors at play, as well as their implications for the future and, possibly, humanity's future as a whole. But it's never dull, for within the expository shell of the work lies a touching personal narrative whose universal themes underpin the larger messages with profound emotional resonance. Throughout, the author's understanding of the topics and command of narrative come together to make this year's Pre-Read an absolute win.

As part of the 2024 Orientation, incoming freshmen were treated to a panel discussion with the author and President Eisgruber. Overheard conversations in the Choi Dining Hall that evening described the event as "kinda interesting, I don't know," and "really warm and cozy." Such an enthusiastic reception by the perpetually disinterested freshman class all but guarantees the event was as much a resounding success as the Pre-Read itself.

The Dinky Devil

Last night, tragedy struck again in a series of student disappearances on the campus we call home. Roger That '28 took his daily stroll from Forbes to NCW at 3am (as one does). However, That would not return to his humble abode in the freakishly blue tiled halls of NCW.

Following his standard routine, That put in his earbuds (Airpod Pro Max Extremes) and proceeded to blast his Spotify daylist: "bouncy divorced corecore late night," decked with boygenius, Sexy Red, Ayesha Erotica, and Coldplay. With the volume set at a deafening level, That often referred to this late night walk as "teleporting back to NCW." Little did That know he would be teleporting somewhere much scarier and smellier: New York City.

This year crime at Princeton is at an all time high. CampusRec balls are stolen every day, various student organizations are laundering money and avoiding taxes, and even worse: econ students are starting profitable non-profits. That's disappearance is part of a string of missing students that is largely attributed to a mystical entity known as the "Dinky Devil." Our expert crime scene analysts have pieced together an approximation of That's kidnapping based on CCTV footage from the Wawa and witness testimony from Tran Sit '27. Sit was completing her nightly walk from NCW to Forbes when the events unfolded.

Crossing Alexander Street, That began the walk past the LCA, past the Wawa, and lastly, past the Dinky station. With temperatures beginning to drop on this cool November evening, the breeze distracted That, as he put his hands into his pockets and continued his trek. Unaware of his surroundings, That continued past the Dinky station towards the parking lot behind the very PSAFE building. However, before That could fully pass the station, disaster occurred.

At the edge of the Dinky station lies a railing that is currently broken, leaving a hazardous pathway between the sidewalk and the tracks. However, this simple safety hazard only opened the floodgates to something far more sinister: The "Dinky Devil."

Even with "212" blasting at insane volumes, That began to hear an eerie scratch at the site of the broken railing. That stopped in his tracks confused and worried that an innocent animal may be trapped under the tracks. What That was met with was not a kitten, but large claws at the edge of the sidewalk and the top of what appeared to be red horns. Frightened, That began to run. He didn't want to know what terrifying beast lay beneath the rail.

Before getting far into the PSAFE parking lot, That suddenly felt arms reach into the gap between his back and backpack, yanking him backwards. His feet flew up, and only one black and white size 9 Adidas Samba was left found at the scene.

The Dinky Devil would then woosh That onto the Dinky at 3:32 AM, and to the detective's surprise, the train actually ran. Knowing that the Dinky never runs at these hours, detectives can only assume that the large, lanky, long red figure was supernatural in nature, controlling the train beyond the rules and regulations listed within the infamous NJ Transit app schedule. Sit, who was leaving the Wawa with a 16 oz Oreo Cream Smoothie at 3:30 AM recalls seeing the creature drag That onto the train with claws covering his mouth from being able to scream.

Alarmed, Sit immediately called PSAFE, providing this statement, only leaving detectives with the jaw-dropping CCTV footage.

One can only assume that That is now somewhere stranded and missing within the streets of NYC. Why else would one take the Dinky to Princeton Junction? Not Trenton, That's sure.

The Princeton Tiger and our detective team hope That returns home safely and carefully and remembers the one rule of NYC: Do not approach the 42nd Street Elmo impersonators.

If you have any information about That, NJ Transit, the Dinky Devil, or any larger criminal conspiracy theories please contact us at dinkydetectives@tigermag.com.

SUBJECT: TIGER ALERT

This notice is to advise you of an incident that concerns the University community.

Date: November 12, 2024

Incident: Disappearance by the "Dinky Devil"

At about 3:30 a.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 12, a student was brutally kidnapped onto the New Jersey Transit "Dinky" train as it arrived at Princeton Station. The Department of Public Safety received a report about the incident this morning. The assailant was described as being red, long, lanky, and large. Another student reported the incident to PSAFE and also all of her friends in much more vivid detail. NJ Transit Police have also been notified of the incident. If you have information relevant to this incident, please contact DPS at 609-258-1000.

We remind all community members of the tips listed below and our general crime prevention tips listed on our website: <https://publicsafety.princeton.edu/safety/safety-security>.

If you want to help in the search for the Dinky Devil, try walking from NCW to Forbes or Forbes to NCW very late at night with "Vacation Bible School" blasting in your ears. Be as unaware as possible.

Trust your instincts, find the devil.

The Federal Clery Act requires the University to follow its Timely Warning procedures when a Clery reportable crime is committed and a university determines that there is an ongoing threat to the health or safety of students or employees occurring on campus. Princeton University is issuing this alert in accordance with its procedures.
